AMP appoints new Chief Information Officer

Leading life insurer and retirement savings provider, AMP has today announced the appointment of Chris Robb in the newly created role of Chief Information Officer (CIO). Chris' role is effective immediately and is based in the Auckland office where he will be responsible for overseeing AMP's technology initiatives.

Chris has an extensive IT background and has held senior leadership roles across the technology and finance industries for more than 15 years, including leading technology teams at ASB, IAG, Genesis Energy and Tower.

Most recently he has been with ANZ as Head of Technology for Retail and Business Banking. During his career, Chris has been responsible for a wide range of system transformations, new product introductions and innovation.

Commenting on the appointment, Kevin Bouchier, AMP's Chief Operating Officer says: "It's my absolute pleasure to welcome Chris to AMP. He brings a considerable wealth of experience across digital strategy development, agile development roll-outs and establishment of mobile innovation teams and I look forward to him being a key member of my leadership team."
